

Matthias von Davier

"Some Notes on Models for Cognitive Diagnosis"

Abstract:

Models for cognitive diagnosis - in their current incarnation - have been around for some time now. The idea of extracting more from test data than a single ability parameter or person score has been around for some time now. This talk will present some recent findings on models for cognitive diagnosis and their relationship to other models that have been around for some time.