Be it resolved that on February 8, 2013, the faculty and staff of the College of Education at the University of Maryland honored the life and professional career and acknowledge the death of Harry Green, former faculty member in the Department of Human Development.

Dr. Green attended public schools in the commonwealth of Virginia and received his Bachelor, Master’s and PhD. Degrees from the University of Virginia in Charlottesville. While there, his areas of concentration were Counseling Psychology, Guidance and Psychological Testing.

He began his career as a Counseling Psychologist at the University of California, Berkeley. Two years later, he came to the University of Maryland to join the faculty in the Department of Human Development/Institute for Child Study and remained in our College of Education for thirty-one years.

Known as a creative teacher, Dr. Green delighted in developing new courses. He was particularly interested in teaching the Department’s off campus programs in Western Maryland and in Salisbury, Maryland. During the Institute for Child Study’s more active phase, Dr. Green was a regular consultant in its Child and Youth Study program in the state of Maryland and throughout the country. He was also a participant in the Department’s massive Head Start evaluation study.

Following his retirement from the University, an endowed scholarship was established in Dr. Green’s honor.

He passed away in November 2011.

The College of Education is thankful for the services rendered by Dr. Harry Green and extends its heartfelt condolences to his family, friends and colleagues.
